

EDDIE SEVILLE

Eddie Seville is an American songwriter and multi-instrumentalist from New England who's best known as the voice & creative force behind the alt-country / roots rock band the Steel ★ Rodeo.

As a solo artist, a noted member of Frank Carillo's Bandoleros and a frequent "special guest", he's performed throughout the continental US, Canada, Europe and the Virgin Islands.

Eddie's written songs published by Sony / ATV, songs released on Island / Atlantic and Universal Records, music that aired on three major television networks and a debut single that reached #19 on independent country radio.

His songs are covered by local musicians, regional bands and international artists, most notably George Kooymans of the Dutch band Golden Earring, who covered one of Eddie's songs (Blind Love) on a 2010 release and another (Ticket To Heaven) in 2017.

BLUES MATTERS (UK):

"beautifully arranged and empathetically written ballads form the staple diet of Seville's repertoire" and "comparisons with Springsteen, Dylan and the UK's Sean Taylor are inevitable but not completely exaggerated given the many magical moments of sheer brilliance"

As an arranger, a player and session collaborator, Eddie's work spans projects with producer Paul Orofino (Foghat / The Cars / Ahmad Jamal), Augie Meyers (Texas Tornados / Bob Dylan), Marty Ballou (Peter Wolf), Danny Miranda (BOC / Queen), Andrew Carillo (Joan Osborne), Matt Cartsonis (Warren Zevon), Bob Loveday (Bob Geldof) and Simon Kirke (Free / Bad Company), in addition to numerous credits on a wide range of recordings that include film, television, major and independent label releases.
